

Visiting Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Knox College

The Department of Anthropology and Sociology at Knox College invites applications for a one-year appointment as visiting assistant professor of anthropology beginning September 1, 2024. There is a possibility of renewal. We are particularly interested in candidates whose research focuses on Science and Technology Studies; Political Anthropology; or Medical Anthropology. We are especially interested in candidates whose research focuses on geographical areas other than the Caribbean and Latin America.

Knox is an independent, selective liberal arts institution with a strong commitment to undergraduate teaching in a diverse environment. The Anthropology and Sociology Department offers a joint integrative major that culminates in faculty-supervised student research. The College has three 10-week academic terms per year, with a teaching load of two courses per term.

The successful candidate will have experience using qualitative research methods and be prepared to supervise students conducting ethnographic research, including participation in our senior research sequence. Candidates should also be prepared to teach Introduction to Anthropology, and to offer intermediate and advanced courses in their specialty area.

Knox is a diverse college with over 35% of the student body identifying as American students of color and more than 15% international students. Experience working with diverse populations of students and a commitment to teach successfully in a multicultural environment are expected.

Visiting faculty members at Knox are included in all aspects of the intellectual life of the College. The visiting faculty member will have a modest conference travel budget and access to research resources. Pay is commensurate with first-year, entry-level faculty positions.

Qualifications: Ph.D. in anthropology preferred at time of appointment; exceptional ABD candidates will also be considered.
