

Cruising the Great Lakes with Brian Williams '86

Brian spent two years living abroad in England and India as a child. As a Knox student, he spent a semester on the IES London Studies Program.

His career took him to Egypt multiple times as host to a program that created Egyptian-themed cultural exhibits and experiences in partnership with the Children's Museum of Indianapolis and Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

Brian has traveled extensively in Western Europe, and brings his passion for arts and culture, travel, and history, as well as his knowledge of Knox as both an alum and former administrator, to this program.

As the former vice president for Advancement, Brian led alumni engagement and advancement efforts at Knox College for more than six years. He earned a B.A. in American Studies from Knox, a law degree from Indiana University-Bloomington, and a master's degree in American History from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He now serves as vice president for strategic initiatives at the Associated Colleges for the Midwest (ACM).
