

Visiting Assistant Professor of Sociology, Knox College

The Department of Anthropology and Sociology at Knox College invites applications for an 12-month visiting assistant professor position focusing on the sociology of race and ethnicity to begin September 2023. We are especially interested in candidates whose research focuses on understanding communities of color in the U.S., particularly Black and Latinx populations.

Knox is an independent, selective liberal arts institution with a strong commitment to undergraduate teaching in a diverse environment. The Anthropology and Sociology Department offers a joint integrative major that culminates in faculty-supervised student research. The College has three 10-week academic terms per year, with a teaching load of two courses per term.

The successful candidate will have experience using qualitative research methods and be prepared to supervise students conducting ethnographic research, including participation in our senior research sequence. Candidates should also be prepared to teach Introduction to Sociology, Race and Ethnic Relations, and to offer intermediate and advanced courses in their specialty area.

Knox is a diverse college with over 35% of the student body identifying as American students of color and an additional 15% international students. Experience working with diverse populations of students and a commitment to teach successfully in a multicultural environment are expected.

Visiting faculty members at Knox are included in all aspects of the intellectual life of the College. The visiting faculty member will have a modest conference travel budget and access to research resources. Pay is commensurate with first-year, entry-level faculty positions.

Qualifications: Ph.D. in sociology preferred at time of appointment; exceptional ABD candidates will also be considered.

Candidates should submit:

1. A letter of application that addresses the candidate's preparation for inclusive teaching and mentorship of diverse student populations, describes your research agenda, and articulates your undergraduate liberal arts teaching philosophy
2. A curriculum vitae;
3. Unofficial graduate transcript;
4. Names of three confidential professional references.

Submission via Interfolio: <http://apply.interfolio.com/113529>.

Review of applications begins February 1, 2023 and will continue until the position is filled.
